Editorial

My last editorial has caused a bit of a stir and a couple of issues have emerged. Firstly, that I was being ‘too political’ – whatever that means; and secondly, that although people have complained about my editorial, they haven’t complained to me.

I have said several times in the past that responsibility for the content of the Messenger rests with the editorial team, and that responsibility for the editorial is mine alone. The parish council has no say in what appears in the magazine, other than the parish council section, of course. So, if you have any problems with the Messenger, you should talk to one of the team or, at least, send us an email.

So that’s the process bit out of the way, what I find difficult to get my head round is why people should want to complain about something they’ve read. I understand that people might not agree with me, that they might have a different take on a subject. Well, I’ve had my say; if you disagree with me, you can always put forward your own argument. Or does having a different point of view mean that I shouldn’t express it?

To sum up, if you have anything to say about what you read in the Messenger, say it to someone who produces the Messenger. Most of what we publish gives information about what is happening in Middleton, the only potentially controversial bit is, of course, my editorial. If you disagree with it, write in and we will print your argument, we will even withhold your name, if you think it necessary. However, we will not print anything submitted anonymously.

This is your magazine; if there is anything you want to share with the village, let us know by email at middletonmessenger@yahoo.com

- Mike

If you have any ideas, comments or complaints (especially complaints) you want to share then please email:

middletonmessenger@yahoo.com

Remember, we can’t respond unless we receive your message.

Thanks to everyone who supported the race night! We made a tremendous £2200. We would like Mike and the Robin Hood for hosting a great evening!

Beverley Road Footpath: Some twelve years ago two sinks were installed on Beverley Road, Middleton on the Wolds to alleviate the problem of flooding on Beverley Road and the associated footpath. The footpath continues to flood with water and soil run off leaving the path hazardous to use when wet.

Several people have been injured in recent years, yet East Riding Highway Department does not consider that there is a problem. However, Street Scene Hub have given this footpath a reference number, presumably to collate accidents here.

I urge anyone who uses the footpath on Beverley Road and have slipped or fallen to contact the Clerk to the Parish Council and register their complaint. In this way we may eventually influence East Riding Highway department to act.

- Chris Atkin

Thanks for this, Chris. The state of the footpath on Beverley Road has been unacceptable for years and, as we discussed at the last meeting, the parish council has been in frequent contact with East Riding of Yorkshire Council (ERYC) to try to find a permanent solution. This has led to some work by them which, unfortunately, ended up being more cosmetic than practical, in the longer term. Any way that pressure can be brought on the county council to effectively resolve the problem and you are right to encourage anyone affected to write a complaint. However, it would be less effective to send these to the parish clerk than to send them directly to the county council. As we have seen in past dealings with ERYC, if 10 individuals complain directly to the county council, they will record 10 complaints. On the other hand, if those complaints are sent to the parish council to be forwarded en bloc, ERYC will only record one complaint. Therefore, if anyone would like to comment on the condition of the Beverley Road footpath, please write to ERYC directly, using the link below.

Burn's Night

A big thank-you to all who supported the Burns night in the village hall.

A very enjoyable evening was held with the ceremony of the address of the haggis with poems, traditional Scottish fayre and live music and dancing. A grand total of £587.91 was raised for Middleton church maintenance.

Local Birds & Wildlife

The snowdrops are out, the birds are starting to sing at about 7am. (It will be earlier by the time you read this!) and the shelves of Easter eggs in the shops feel just slightly more forgivable than they were just after Christmas.

With spring on the horizon, I have been getting excited about getting more plants in my new pond, and perhaps even attracting dragonflies to lay their eggs there. Probably no frogspawn this year, though I did see one frog once, but “build it and they will come” as wildlife campaigners say. I bought in several types of water snails last year, and they seemed to be increasing in numbers, so all good up until yesterday, when a pair of mallards arrived. Now, many years ago, with our old pond, a pair turned up and my husband and I were very excited; we kept back from the windows and did nothing to disturb them: “Perhaps if they like it here, they might stay!” “We might get ducklings!” but when we next ventured up the garden all our illusions were shattered – the pond was just a muddy mess, all fish, snails and plants gobbled up (we had quite a lot of fish then). So, this year I am less starry-eyed and sure enough the pond had been trashed by the time I checked.

So, this is a bit of a dilemma: I feel bad about not welcoming in wildlife, but it feels like the equivalent of establishing a deer park and then introducing a grey wolf rewilding scheme (or that’s how it must have felt to the snails).

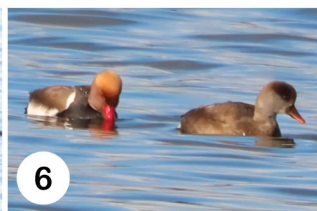

Anyway, Barry and Janny have been having happier times:

“The last fortnight has been fairly busy for us at Tophill Low. This month all our pictures are from there. It’s amazing how many ducks and waterfowl are there on just one reserve.

Just lately every time we have been there, we have seen at least two foxes (photo 1) and some days we have seen up to eight roe deer comprising two different families (photo 2). When walking down one of the paths we came across three tree creepers in one tree (photo 3), don't very often see this but most welcome. It was great to see the not so common ducks. Female scaup (photo 4), also a male scaup (photo 5) and a pair of red-crested pochard (photo 6) and lastly the smallest member of the sawbill family, male and female smew (photo 7).

More sea birds are coming back to the cliffs at Bempton; numbers are swelling every week. The dolphins have been showing really well this week almost every day. Our friends have got some great pictures of peregrines in action hunting the cliffs. Won't be long before the puffins arrive!"

It's lovely having Barry and Janny out in the field hunting out and photographing the wildlife, I should have said before how much I appreciate them!

Finally, several people have mentioned seeing white pheasants around the village and particularly on The Paddocks. There are definitely two up there, but not a pair; it required detective work to establish that they have been seen at the same time in different gardens. Apparently, they are bred intentionally and used as 'marker' birds to make the flocks of pheasants easier to spot (I wonder if the gamekeepers use drones?) and according to the internet anyone killing one on a shoot has to pay a fine, which some shoots use as a charity fund-raiser. I would love to hear more about this, if any gamekeepers would like to get in touch! Incidentally these are not albino birds – if you see one, gaze into its eyes and if they are not pink then it is a commercially bred one.

Well, that's it for this month, do get in touch (even if you are not a gamekeeper) with anything interesting you have come across.

The Maha Kumbh Mela, one of the world's largest spiritual gatherings has been running from January 13th and will end on February 26th. This particular variety of Mela apparently happens once every 144 years due to a rare celestial alignment. It is deeply rooted in Hindu mythology where drops of the 'divine nectar of immortality' fell at sacred locations. One of these locations is the confluence of the Ganga, Yamuna, and the mythical Saraswati rivers. Ritual bathing in the holy rivers is believed to cleanse sins and bring spiritual merit. The event also serves as a platform for cultural and philosophical exchange, attracting sages, scholars, and pilgrims from around the world. So far, some 500 million devotees have taken part. That's a lot of sins!

Shree Panchami, a festival dedicated to Goddess Saraswati, the deity of knowledge and creativity, was recently celebrated across Nepal. Devotees believe that worshipping Goddess Saraswati on this day enhances wisdom and intellect. Temples dedicated to Saraswati saw large crowds, especially students. Many parents introduce their children to writing as part of the 'akshararambha' tradition, a ritual in which children are introduced to writing for the first time, which is thought to ensure educational success. The day is also considered the beginning of spring with longer days and warmer weather. Beats bathing in a river with 500 million other sinners.

Kathmandu has recently acquired some testing machines and is now conducting emissions tests on vehicles in the city. Officials say that of the around 1,050 diesel vehicles tested, including public buses, school buses, minibuses, pick-up trucks and trucks, nearly 80 percent failed emission tests. Similarly, 30 percent of petrol vehicles (both private and government cars) among the around 150 tested, failed emission tests. Traffic police have been imposing fines on failing vehicles and there is a proposal to ban all vehicles over 20 years old. Kathmandu can be extremely polluted and any move to clean up the air can only be a good thing.
